CrimeStoppers.

Speak up. Stay safe.

Sexual harassment takes many forms. All of them need to be stopped.

Our charity has commissioned a major piece of research, working in partnership with the University of Suffolk Centre for Abuse Research, launching with our anonymous survey:

Safe in public: understanding how sexual harassment affects people's use of public space Survey \(surveymonkey.co.uk\)

The aim of this research is to learn more about people's experiences of sexual harassment in public spaces, how people think we should talk about these behaviours, and how people think we should respond to these behaviours to make public spaces safe and accessible.

The findings from this research will become the cornerstone of a national campaign our charity will run later this year, focusing on challenging perpetrator behaviour and working to take a stand against sexual harassment in all its forms.

To make this research really count we need 2000 responses, therefore we'd like to invite your organisation to support raising awareness of our new survey.

Follow us on social media to retweet and share our messaging promoting the survey, or download our social copy templates to post across your own channels.

If you've seen sexual harassment in a public space and don't want to speak to the police, you can tell us what you know on the phone 0800 555 111 and online, 24/7, 365 days a year.

If you have any questions about our planned campaign launching next year, please get in touch at hello@crimestoppers-uk.org
